Smeaton's Lighthouse stands in a prominent position on the front of Plymouth Hoe. It was the third Lighthouse erected on the dangerous Eddystone Rock, which is situated 14 miles from the harbour. Smeaton commenced its construction on June 12th, 1757, the total height being 94 feet. It occupied two years in building and stood triumphantly at its post until 1882, when the present edifice, by Sir J. N. Douglass, was completed, and the old building was removed to its present situation, where it stands in honoured retirement, overlooking the Harbour which it formerly so jealously guarded.
